Hi all,

This year we bought an Outwell Nevada M, we are massive fans of Outwell's as our very first tent which we still have was an Outwell Winfield.

The Nevada M is a spacious 5 berth tent with three doors, allowing lots of air into the living area and through to the sleeping area, there are vents round the back for the sleeping area as well, the doors also all have large window areas on them so on a cold raining day you can shut up shop but still watch the world go by.

It also benefits from a SIG, electric cable zipped opening and a small rain canopy over one door.

I think this tent is new for 2008 and is brilliant the best thing we like about it is the strengthening rod between the main door and the sleeping area, we had a tent of similar design which blew in on a very windy night at the coast which didn't have a strengthening rod. You could chuck anything at it wind wise and it won't budge.

We used to have a tent for Spring/Summer and one for Autumn/Winter but the Nevada has done away with than its big enough for long holidays and small enough to keep warm in the midst of Winter.

All round a great tent with ample room for me and mine and our two camping dogs. And all our gear aswell and at a tad under £200.00 good value for awell made tent. We also have the carpet for it which is a dream I love it so soft and cosy.
